QUESTION 1

SINGLE CHOICE

Under Connecticut occupational licensing rules, an Rr1 (Radio Dealer Restrict) endorsement authorizes the holder to engage in which of the following activities?

- ☐ A Install, repair, and adjust commercial two-way radio transmitting equipment for any customer, including public-safety frequencies
- ☒ B Deal in radio receiving-only apparatus and limited transmitting devices that do not require an amateur or commercial operator license, with restrictions on power and frequency
- ☐ C Operate any class of amateur radio station at any authorized amateur frequency
- ☐ D Sell and service Citizens Band (CB) radios only, with no authority over any other radio devices

ANSWER B

WHY Connecticut's Radio Dealer Restrict (Rr1) classification is a narrow occupational credential covering dealing in radio receiving apparatus and certain restricted transmitting devices that do not require an FCC operator or station license for the buyer. It is not a general commercial two-way endorsement, not an amateur operator grant, and not limited solely to CB equipment.

SINGLE CHOICE

A customer asks an Rr1 Radio Dealer to program and sell a VHF marine handheld transceiver. Which statement best describes the dealer's authority?

- ☐ A The Rr1 endorsement covers marine VHF radios because they are consumer receiving devices with transmit capability
- ☐ B The Rr1 endorsement covers marine VHF radios only if the buyer presents a ship station license
- ☒ C Marine VHF transceivers are not within the Rr1 scope; a broader radio dealer classification or other appropriate license is required
- ☐ D The Rr1 endorsement covers any device operating below 30 MHz regardless of service

ANSWER C

WHY Marine VHF transceivers operate in a regulated service requiring FCC station licensing (ship station license) and are not part of the receiving-only / restricted transmitting scope of the Rr1 endorsement. Dealers handling such equipment must hold the appropriate broader radio dealer classification or arrange the transaction through properly licensed parties.

QUESTION 3

SINGLE CHOICE

What does Connecticut licensing require an Rr1 Radio Dealer to do at the place of business?

- ☒ A Display the original certificate of registration in a conspicuous location accessible to the public
- ☐ B Post a sign in 2-inch letters stating 'RESTRICTED RADIO DEALER' at every entrance
- ☐ C Display only a photocopy of the certificate behind the service counter
- ☐ D No display requirement exists; the certificate may be kept in a safe

ANSWER A

WHY Connecticut occupational statutes and regulations for licensed trades uniformly require the original (or a clearly posted) license/registration certificate to be displayed conspicuously at the licensed place of business so it is visible to customers and inspectors. The other choices either misstate the rule, invent signage wording not required by law, or improperly limit display to a photocopy at the service counter.

QUESTION 4

SINGLE CHOICE

For an Rr1 Radio Dealer, which recordkeeping practice satisfies Connecticut requirements for restricted transmitting devices sold to a buyer?

- ☐ A Keep no records because restricted transmitting devices are exempt from documentation requirements
- ☒ B Maintain sales records identifying the buyer, the device, the date of sale, and retain them for the period required by state regulation
- ☐ C Retain only the cash register receipt for seven years
- ☐ D Record only the make and model, since buyer identity is not required for restricted devices

ANSWER B

WHY Connecticut regulations require licensed radio dealers to keep identifiable sales records (buyer, device, date) for restricted transmitting apparatus and to retain them for the statutory period so the records can be produced for inspection. The other options either omit required information, rely on an inadequate substitute, or invent an exemption that does not exist.

QUESTION 5

SINGLE CHOICE

An Rr1 Radio Dealer allows the certificate to lapse. Which statement about the consequence is correct?

- ☐ A The dealer may continue operating indefinitely while a late renewal is processed
- ☒ B Operating after expiration without renewal is unlicensed activity and may subject the holder to penalties; the dealer must cease restricted radio dealing until reinstated
- ☐ C There is a 90-day automatic grace period during which all activities remain authorized
- ☐ D Lapse simply requires payment of a late fee within one year; no operational change occurs

ANSWER B

WHY Connecticut occupational licenses are not self-extending. Once the Rr1 endorsement expires, the holder is no longer authorized to engage in the licensed activity and continuing to deal in restricted radio devices is unlicensed activity subject to administrative penalty. The dealer must stop the regulated activity until the credential is properly renewed or reinstated.

QUESTION 6

SINGLE CHOICE

An Rr1 Radio Dealer plans to move the dealership to a new address within Connecticut. The dealer must:

- ☒ A Notify the Connecticut Department of Consumer Protection (or successor licensing authority) and obtain approval before operating at the new location
- ☐ B Simply move and begin operating; no notice is required because the certificate name is unchanged
- ☐ C Apply for an entirely new license under a new classification
- ☐ D Move only after surrendering the certificate and reapplying as a new applicant

ANSWER A

WHY A change of business location is a material change to a licensed occupational credential in Connecticut. The licensee must notify the issuing authority and obtain approval/endorsement of the new location before operating there. The other options either invent a no-notice rule, incorrectly require a new license class, or impose a needless surrender-and-reapply procedure.

QUESTION 7

SINGLE CHOICE

Which of the following would be a recognized basis for disciplinary action against an Rr1 Radio Dealer in Connecticut?

- ☒ A Selling a restricted transmitting device to a minor in violation of applicable state restrictions
- ☐ B Refusing to sell a device to a customer the dealer suspects may misuse it
- ☐ C Charging a price the customer considers too high
- ☐ D Closing the dealership for a two-week vacation

ANSWER A

WHY Selling restricted radio transmitting apparatus to prohibited purchasers (such as minors, where state restrictions apply) is grounds for disciplinary action against a Connecticut radio dealer. The other options describe lawful business discretion, ordinary pricing, and a routine business closure — none of which constitute misconduct under the licensing framework.

QUESTION 8

TRUE FALSE

True or False — Only the person named on the Rr1 Radio Dealer Restrict certificate, or a properly authorized representative acting on behalf of the licensee at the registered premises, may conduct activities under the endorsement.

☒ A True☐ B FalseANSWER A

WHY Connecticut occupational licenses are issued to a specific person or business entity at a specific location. Activities under the endorsement must be conducted by the named licensee or by an authorized representative acting on the licensee's behalf at the registered premises. An unrelated third party cannot independently conduct restricted radio dealing under someone else's Rr1 credential.

QUESTION 9

SINGLE CHOICE

Under Connecticut occupational trades licensing, an RR1 (Radio Dealer Restrict) endorsement authorizes the holder to engage in which of the following activities?

- ☐ A Selling, installing, and servicing Citizens Band (CB) radio equipment only.
- ☒ B Selling restricted transmitting devices that operate under FCC Part 15 or similar low-power rules, with no on-air transmitting permitted.
- ☐ C Performing major repair and alignment of commercial two-way radio base stations used by public safety agencies.
- ☐ D Operating any licensed radio transmitting station on behalf of customers without holding a separate FCC operator license.

ANSWER B

WHY The RR1 Radio Dealer Restrict endorsement is limited to the sale of restricted (low-power, non-licensed) transmitting devices. It does not authorize installation of commercial two-way systems, alignment of public-safety transmitters, or operation of any FCC-licensed station. Option A is too narrow (CB-only) and option D misstates both scope and FCC operator-license requirements. Option C describes work that falls under other radio dealer/endorsement categories, not RR1.
